PERSONAL STATEMENT

Soccer is my passion, it was my first true love and for that reason I never see myself leaving the game of soccer completely. As my playing career has come to a close at Bellarmine, I look to open doors and find a new way to love the game. Coaching is something I have always wanted to do in my future and give back to the game. I believe in the importance of having female coaches for young girls and the impact it makes on them seeing strong female role models in the sport and that is something I hope to bring to whatever group I coach. Aside from that I would want to stress the importance of foundational skills of soccer over the result of the game. Winning and losing at the ages of 8,9, or 10 is not important, the important factor is getting them to work on dribbling, passing, finishing, and understanding the beautiful game in front of them. This is what I would push for as a coach, working to build those foundational skills so that when they do reach High School and the results begin to matter they will be well prepared.
